Educational Qualifications

PhD in Pacific History (2001), the Australian National University.

Master of Arts with Distinction in Pacific History (1992), University of Otago, New Zealand.

First Class Honours Degree in Pacific and African History (1984), University of Otago, New Zealand.

Biography

After graduating in Pacific and African history from Otago University, I studied at the University of Hawai'i at Mānoa and worked as an archaeologist and for Television New Zealand, before completing my MA at Otago and PhD at the Australian National University (ANU). I teach courses focused on environmental conflict resolution, sustainable development and climate change mitigation in the Asia Pacific Region. I taught at Otago, Victoria University of Wellington and James Cook University in Queensland before joining ANU. My current research focuses on Asia Pacific visions of history and sustainable development, and the history of conflict and conflict resolution in the Asia Pacific region, especially conflicts over natural resources with particular reference to the Pacific Ocean.
